THE HARMONY MAP · 1 OF 5

The loop of a hard day

Stress does not stay in one place. It travels through mind, body and spirit — and you can step out of it at three points.

A · Mind door: name it

Say silently what is here: "this is worry." Naming a feeling can loosen its grip.

B · Body door: breathe out slowly

Five breaths, longer out than in. Slow breathing is linked to a calmer heart rhythm.

C · Spirit door: soften

"This is hard, and I am allowed to be here." Kindness can quiet the loop.

A common pattern, not a diagnosis. Your days may look different.

Which layer is leading today?

Pick the day that sounds most like yours. Each has its own way out.

A MIND DAY

Mind

is leading

YOU NOTICE

- Thoughts loop and will not rest
- Feelings land in the body: a tight chest, a knotted stomach
- It is hard to settle and easy to spiral

YOUR DOOR

Go through the body

Feel your feet on the floor, take five slow breaths, then name three sounds you can hear.

A BODY DAY

Body

is leading

YOU NOTICE

- Tired, flat and heavy
- Your mind was clear and busy, until the fuel ran out
- Too long indoors, or too long alone

YOUR DOOR

Move, and be with people

Walk briskly for ten minutes, ideally with someone, or call a friend. A calm mind is something to pace, not to spend.

A HEAVY DAY

Spirit

is leading

YOU NOTICE

- The past feels heavy
- You have carried everyone else's needs and kept none for yourself
- Joy feels far away

YOUR DOOR

Accept, kindly

Hand on your chest: "This is hard, and I am allowed to feel it." Then one small thing that brings a little joy.

Most days are a mix. Begin with the loudest layer, then come back to the middle.

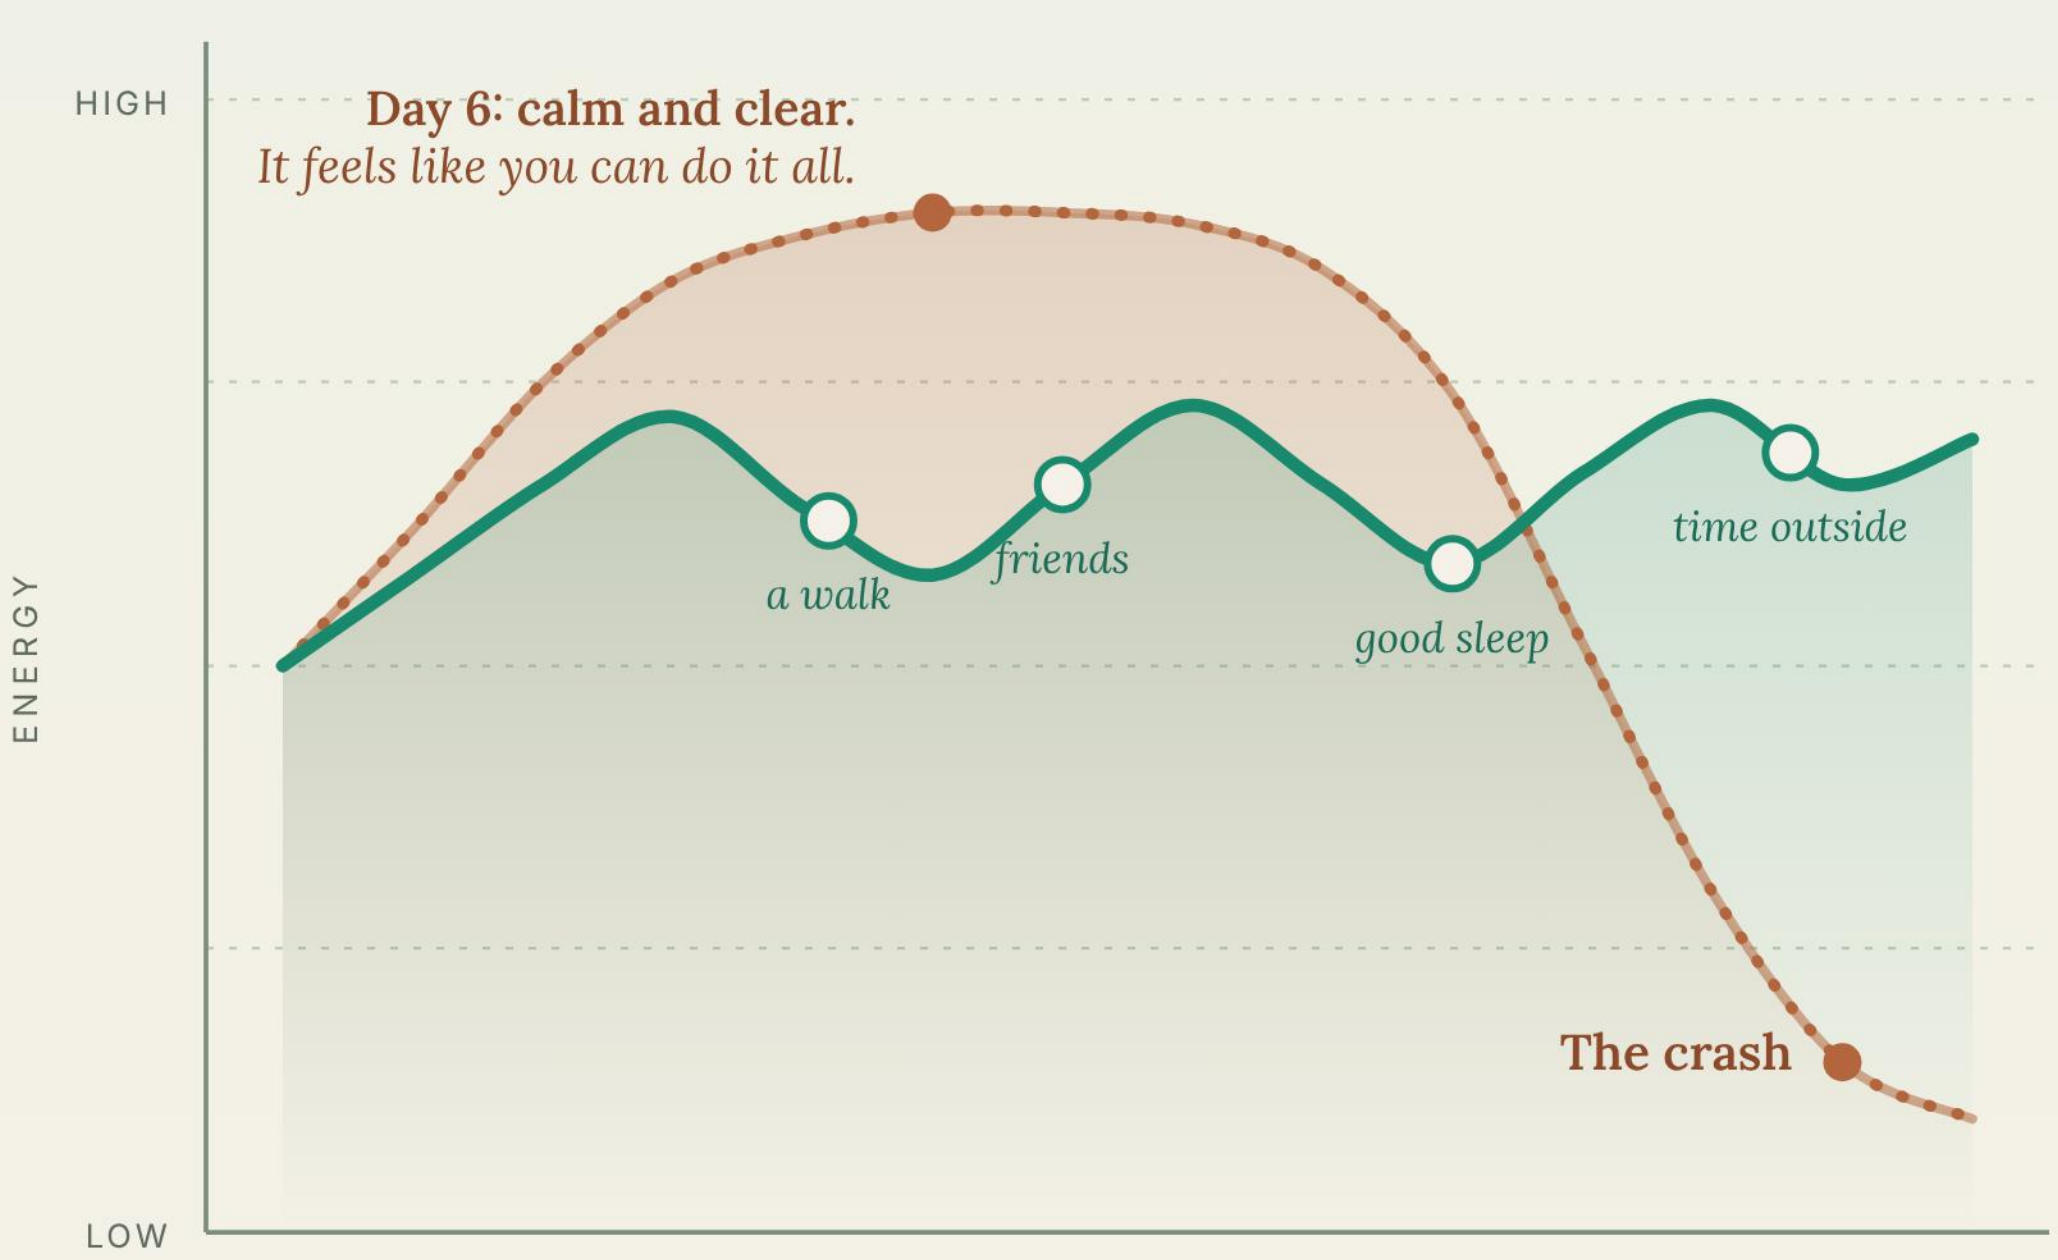

Reflections, not medical advice.

THE HARMONY MAP · 3 OF 5

The calm-mind trap

A clear mind is a gift. Spend it like one.

Push through, no pauses — Work in waves, with stops to refill

TWO WEEKS, DAY BY DAY

PACE IT

Work in waves

Focus, then pause. Short breaks keep a clear mind going for longer.

REFILL IT

Use the body and people

Movement and time with others refill what long hours of thinking drain.

ALLOW IT

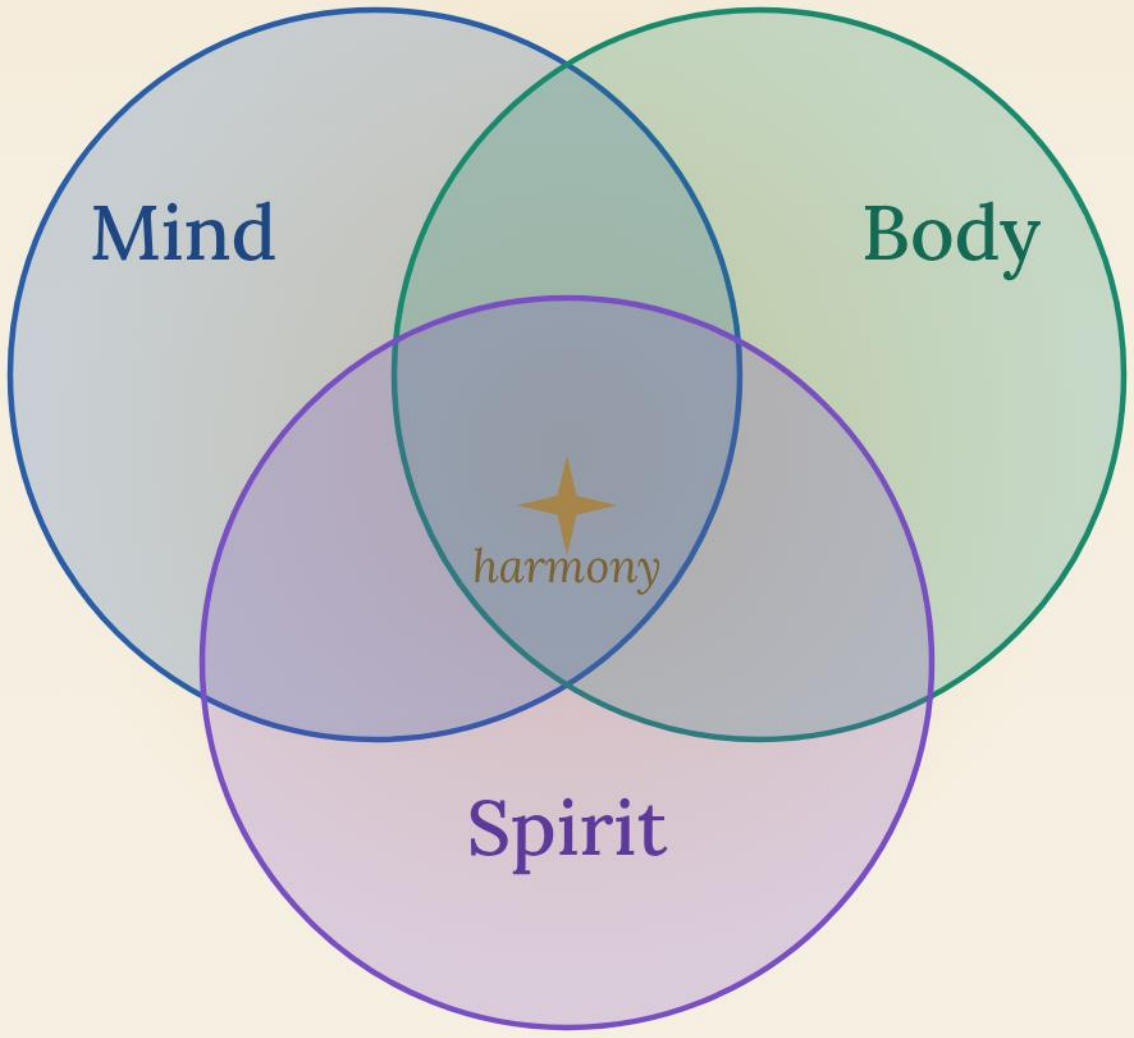

Energy has seasons

It moves in cycles, through the day, the month and the year. A low stretch is information, not failure.

A simple picture of a common pattern, not a measurement.

How harmony appears

You cannot force it. You can make room for it, on bright days and on heavy ones.

A BRIGHT DAY

Pure joy

Mind and body agree for a moment: light, present, nothing missing. Spirit is simply there.

A HEAVY DAY

Quiet acceptance

Thoughts are unpleasant and feelings are heavy, yet something in you accepts the past as it was.

Ways to make room

Time outside sky, trees, water	Slow down one thing at a time	Safe company people you trust	An hour for you no one to look after

Reflections, not medical advice.

THE HARMONY MAP · 5 OF 5

Seven doors, seven days

One small practice a day, five minutes each. Keep what helps. Skip what does not.

DAY 1
Notice
Three times today, ask: which layer is loudest, mind, body or spirit?
ALL THREE

DAY 2
Name it
When a feeling rises, say it silently: “this is worry,” “this is tiredness.”
MIND

DAY 3
Breathe out
Five slow breaths, longer out than in. Feel your feet on the floor.
BODY

DAY 4
Move, then meet
A brisk ten-minute walk, ideally with someone, or a call to a friend.
BODY

DAY 5
Work in waves
Focus for a while, pause on purpose, then go back. Stop before you are empty.
MIND

DAY 6
Soften
Hand on chest: “This is hard, and I am allowed to feel it.” Then one small joy.
SPIRIT

DAY 7
Make room
An hour just for you, outside if you can. No goal, nothing to fix.
HARMONY

Reflections, not medical advice. If you feel unwell for a long time, please talk to a professional.